The Herbary Chandelier is a sculptural piece shaped by hanging branches of recycled glass leaves. The cut pieces that cascade closer to the bulbs absorb a greater degree of the light to read as clearer, while the outer stems retain more of the pale blue/green color of the glass from which the leaves are made. The arcing octagonal frame has hints of Asian influences given each section bends slightly and creates cross-hatches where each rod attaches to the next. The fixture has six lights and is dimmable.
