Proof that lighting is the jewelry in a room is the Mandeville Pendant with its facet-like glass elements placed between ribbed sections of iron in an antique gold finish. The translucent shade is hammered for an uptick in texture, and the colors of the painted glass—Butter Rum Sandbar, Matt Ombre, and Deep Grey—call to mind a 1960s vibe. The fixture has one light; there may be slight variations in the surfaces of the glass from pendant to pendant.
