Enduring dining rooms often find their character in familiar silhouettes that feel as though they have been gathered and loved over generations. The Driftwood Splatback Arm Chair in the Worn Saddle finish brings that sense of history to the table with a warm brown tone inspired by the burnished beauty of supple leather and hand tooled heirlooms. Solid oak construction gives the chair a substantial presence, while a wood seat, graceful arms, and open slat back preserve its inviting simplicity. Generous arms lend an added sense of comfort and distinction, making the chair a natural choice for the head of the table while remaining versatile enough to use throughout the dining setting. Its open back lightens the silhouette and allows the warmth of the oak to become an essential part of the room. Paired with any of the Driftwood dining tables, the Driftwood Splatback Arm Chair in the Worn Saddle finish creates a setting that feels gracious without becoming formal. Its timeless character invites guests to settle in, share another story, and linger around the table just a little longer.
