Gatherings have a way of lingering when the dining room feels warm, comfortable, and beautifully layered. The Driftwood Upholstered Side Chair in the Worn Saddle finish brings that atmosphere to the table with a warm brown wood frame inspired by the burnished character of supple leather and hand tooled heirlooms. Beige performance fabric softens the seat and back, while natural knots, worm holes, and a dry distressed surface give the wood the feeling of a piece with history. Wood legs connected by stretchers create a classic foundation that feels substantial without becoming formal. Against the warmth of the Worn Saddle finish, the neutral upholstery introduces a sophisticated contrast while offering the durability and ease of performance fabric for everyday dining. Surrounding a Driftwood dining table, these chairs help create the kind of room that seems to have come together naturally over years of living. Their blend of tailored comfort and time softened character sets a gracious stage for shared meals, celebrations, and conversations that continue long after dinner is finished.
