Set against the layers of a thoughtfully composed dining room, the Driftwood 72in Round Dining Table in the Burnt Timber finish creates a striking place for people to come together. Its nuanced black brown tone evokes the quiet drama of wood softened by years of time and touch, with natural knots, worm holes, and a dry distressed surface emerging through the darker coloration to give the table depth and individuality. An expansive 72 inch round top rests above an open pedestal base with a sculptural interlocking design, creating an architectural centerpiece that feels dramatic without overwhelming the room. Comfortable seating for up to six makes the table equally suited to intimate dinners, weekend gatherings, and evenings when conversation stretches well beyond the last course. Dark and sophisticated, the Burnt Timber finish gives the table a sense of permanence while keeping its point of view distinctly current. It anchors the room with quiet confidence, creating a setting where thoughtful design, beautiful materials, and everyday moments come together naturally.
